THE description which we published yesterday from the Anti-Slavery Reporter, concerning the treatment of Chinese Coolies in Peru, throws some further light upon this much vexed question; and, on the whole, it must be admitted to confirm in some respects the more favourable accounts which have been given on the subject. It is true that the writer concludes his statement with a tragic account of the death of a Chinaman, who he was told had been beaten, but who, according to. another version of the affair, had been killed during a revolt of the coolies on an estate, in in this flarbour, the property of the King of to walk. He did not make any report, but on see whether it had not been published ten years the course of which the overseer had been murdered. In this, the correspondent does $300,000, alleged to be due from him. -Some not believe in the least, although there is not and it was finally decided to adjourn the case any evidence of the truth of the story told to Monday next, at 11 a.m., Mr. Kingsmill to him beyond the bare statement of one! At all events, there must appear to anyone who knows how readily gangs of Chinese will revolt, much more probability of this version of the affair being true than the correspondent seemed for a moment to imagine. Even if the tragic affair which he spoke of actually took place, it is clear that he was judging of the whole by an exception,

This is not done, as many have supposed, by their being forced into prolonged terms of servitude, but it seems that after their terms are up, they follow the Chinese trading instinct, and set up in a small way of business, generally intermarrying with some of the native women of the country. Taken altogether, the account does not display so bad a state of things by any means as would be imagined from the reports ordinarily current; and it is shown that the oppression which the Chinaman has to submit to occasionally results more from general weakness in the Government than from any special unfairness towards him as a China-When we bear in mind the hard system of oppression under which the lower classes of Chinese often suffer in their own each. The point is of considerable importance, as it neight explain to some extent the exceptional desire, which some of the natives in Hongkong bave of late displayed, to mix up in matters of emigration in such a way that they might get the management of all connected with it into their own hands by their so called detectives, through which means it would be easy for them effectually to stop all emigration not in accordance with arrange-

This was in February, 1862. These notes were not to bear interest, and the amount of them thus authorized was fixed at 150,000,000 dols. 1862, a further issue of the same amount beonnie necessary, and was made precisely on the samo conditions as the first. Finally, on the last day of June, 1864, a Mird issue was authorized, the amount of potes or greenbacks in

To discharge these liabilities in State was in similar position. Nor would individuals fare better in case of resumption. sumption was therefore out of the question. But it was thought that the way for a return to a metallic currency might be prepared gradually, and therefore safely, by a contraction of the volume of paper in circulation. The measure would, at any rate, reduce the cost of the new coinage, by lessening the amount to be issued. But, independdently of that advantage, it was expected that i when the number of greenbacks was diminished, the purchasing power of each of them would be raised, until at last it would equal that of gold; and that thus the precious metals would almost of themselves come back into circulation Acting on this belief, Congress, in April, 1866, authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to sell bonds, that is to say, to mcrease the debt, and to apply the proceeds in " retiring Treasury was throwing doubts not merely on the solvency | City, that the solicitor be instructed to take of the promisers, butupon their intention bonestly to act up to their word. But it was when the harvest came round, and the crops had to be "moved"-that is, bought up, transported to the shipping ports, and exported to Europe—that this scarcity was more especially felt, as then heavy advances were needed by the dealers in cutton, corn, and the like. The banks were drained to the very limit of the reserve required by law; and this law. by insisting that the banks in New York and some other great cities should at all times keep in reserve 25 per cent, of their entire circulation in currency or gold, while the banks elsewhere kept 15 per cont., intensified the scarcity. "Gold corners" in New York consequently became regular autumn occurrences, and were attended by a monetary firm for all kinds. crisis more or less severe. As a matter of course, when this bappened there, arose a demand for the reissue of the 44,000,000 withdrawn greenbacks. But until last year the decrease was ineffectual. Twelve months ago. however, Mr. Boutwell took upon himself to reissue a portion of them. The act gave rised to a great outery. Mr. Boutwell defended it on the ground that by the original Legal Tender Acts the Secretary of the Treasury is ON NEW YORK .-given power to reissue notes coming into his hands from time to time. It was contended by his opponents, however, that the purport of these Acis was to create a paper currency with a view to raising funds, and that a currency could not exist if every time any portion was paid into the Treasury it ceased to be money. The clause on which Mr. Boutwell relied is manifestly necessary, therefore, in every Legal Tender Act. But, apart from this consideration, it was maintained that the earlier Act, must be governed by the intention. of the later. But of the later Acts the first was passed for the express purpose of contract- | . ing the currency, and the last, though it stop- China and Japan Marine Insurance-Tla. 100 ped that operation, avoided ordering a reissue. the power claimed by Mr. Boutwell was one vernment, even to the British Government in India, but in the hands of a Government so Victoria Fire Insurance Company's Sharesnotoriously and incurably corrupt, as the mitting Mr. Bontwell to be all that his most knowing who might be his successor. THE GREAT SNOW. FROM "WHITE ROSE AND RED," BY THE AUTHOR OF "ST. ABE." Still Frost waited, very still; Then be whistled, loud and shrill; Then he pointed north, and lo! The main Army of the Snow, Black as Erebus afar, Blotting sun, and moon, and star, Drifting, in confusion driven. Sereaming, straggling, rent and riven. Whirling, wailing, blown afar In an awful wind of War. Dragging drifts of dead beneath With a melancholy groan. While the fierce Frost set his teeth. Rose erect, and waved them on!

All day-long the legions passed On an ever-gathering blast; In an ever-gathering night. Fast they eddied on their flight. With a tramping and a renr; Like the waves on a wild shore; With a motion and a gleam, Whirling driven in a dream: On they drave in drifts of white, Burying Drowsietown from sight," Covering ponde, and woode, and roads, Shrouding trees and men's abodes; While the great Pond loaded deep, Turning over in its sleep. Groaned; -b it when night came, for soot Wind met wind with wail uncouth. Frost and Storm fou ht mail and tooth. Shrieking, and the roofs rock'd under.

Soured out of its sleep that night. Dromaietown awoke in fright: Chimney-pots above it flying. Windows crashing to the ground. Snow-flates blinding, multiplying, Snow-drift whirling round and round: While, whene'er the strife seemed dying, The great North-wind, shrilly crying. Clash'd his shield in battle-sound !

Multitudinous and vast, Legions after legions passed. Still-the air behind was drone With new legions coming near; Still they waver'd, wander'd on; Glimmer'd, trembled, and were gone. While the drift grew deeper, deeper, On the roofs and at the doors, While the wind awoke each sleeper With its melancholy rours, Once the Moon looked out, and lo! B'nd against her face the now Like a wild waite grave-clith lay, I dl she slinddering crept away. Then thro' durkness like the grave, On and on the legions drave.

When the dawn came, Drowsietown Smother'd in the snow-drift lay. Still the swarms were dritting down In a dark and dreadful day,

HOW DANIEL DREW SPELLS

A good story is told by a friend of Daniel Drew, which the news of his illness calls up. But when the cashier found the lock refused to yield to the magic He tried and tried again, but without success. Finally, happening to remember that Daniel's early education had been neglected, he attributed his ill luck to poor orthography. He therefore tried the look upon Still no success; and then upon "doar," with no better fortune. Finally, be coming disgusted, he proceeded to the St Nicholas, routed " Daniel" out of his choicest morning pap, and as he stuck his highteap out of the door, the colloquy ensued: "Mr. Drew, I can't open the safe on 'door.' You must have concluded to change the word." "Change the word! Nothing o' the kind. I shut it on 'door.' " "Are you sure, sir?" " Sure, sir, you tarnal ape; of course I'm sure Go back to your work, and don't come fooling roun' here this time o' the mornin'." " Well perhaps, Mr. Drew, I don't spell the word right. How did you spell it?" "Spell it! Any fool can spell door. Dec-a-r-e, doare, or course, sir. If you can't spell door, sir, you're no cashier for me. Pack up your duds and go out of the door. '' And shutting the "door" in the cashier's face, Daniel returned to his bed in a passion, and the clerk to his safe. Armed with the open sesame of "doare, Bowever, the safe flew open without any further trouble, and when Daniel arrived, molified by a good-breakfast and his morning prayer, he advised his cashier that he might keep his place, provided he would improve his time and "go tu spellin" skool in the evenin'.''
